

SalesDesk Warranty and Service Policy

This internal document explains warranty handling, service timelines, replacement conditions, and escalation rules for 9to5 Seating products.

ErgoFlex X2 Warranty

The ErgoFlex X2 is covered by a five-year limited warranty from the invoice date. The warranty covers manufacturing defects affecting the frame, synchronized tilt mechanism, adjustable lumbar support, and seat-height adjustment system.

Damage caused by misuse, accidental impact, liquid exposure, unauthorized repair, or normal wear and tear is not covered under the standard warranty.

Warranty Claim Requirements

A warranty claim must include the invoice number, customer name, product model, purchase date, a description of the issue, and clear photographs or video evidence of the reported defect.

The service team should acknowledge a complete warranty request within two business days. Initial technical review should normally be completed within five business days.

Replacement and Repair Rules

Where a covered defect can be resolved by replacing a component, the company should prefer component replacement over full chair replacement.

A full chair replacement requires approval from a service manager when the defect affects the main frame, repeated repairs have failed, or the required component is unavailable for more than thirty calendar days.

Escalation Guidance

Sales representatives must not independently promise a full product replacement, cash refund, or warranty extension. Requests involving executive customers, orders above one hundred chairs, or repeated service failures should be escalated to a service manager.

If a customer reports a safety concern such as frame instability, sudden tilt failure, or a broken base, the issue should be marked high priority and escalated immediately.
